AMUSEMENTS

"The Third Degree."

"The Third Degree," presented by the United Play Company at the Colonial theater in this city last night, was by far the best attraction that has been seen here this season. It was a strong play and presented by a company of talented people.

The story of the play was the suicide of a young man driven to desperation by his financial condition. His young friend, a married man disowned by his family because of his marriage, was accused of the murder, there being no eye-witnesses to the suicide. The young man was arrested, and under a grueling questioning, known as the third degree, by a police captain, he finally confessed to the murder. His young wife, who was the cause of her husband being disowned by his family, made the fight alone to save him and won out over all obstacles.

Around this plot the story was woven, and it was full, not only of many thrilling climaxes, but scenes depicting the deepest and tenderest emotions of the human heart.

The player people were all far above an average, and the leaders were complimented with several curtain calls.

"The Thief."

What will undoubtedly prove one of the sensations the season has brought forth will be the appearance in this city of the triumphant success of "The Thief," which ran for two solid years at the Lyceum theater, New York.

This will be the first time that "The Thief" is presented in our city and the opportunity to see one of the world's greatest masterpieces in dramatic writing should not be missed. The critics of two continents have exhausted themselves trying adequately to describe this intense, gripping, overwhelming drama, so full of that indescribable something that pierces the heart with its appeal. For want of a
